First Territorial Legislature Meets Formally Next Tuesday.

Alaska Solons have been gathering for weeks at the Capitol City.
Personnel of the Legislature.

Busy With Preliminaries.

Tuesday next the fourth of March, will be an historic day for Alaska as well as the Democratic Party for in addition to the inauguration in Washington of the first Democratic President in 16 years, the very first Alaska Legislature will convene formally at Juneau the capital of the newly-formed territory farthest north.

For more than a week the newly-elected, and, many of them, uninitiated solons have been arriving by boat from the outlying districts. The trails are many and devious and the modes of travel are many. Dog team, steamer, stage and railroad being used by some who from Nome and Candle, must come by these many conveyances nearly 2000 miles and spend months on the way to be present at the opening session next Tuesday.

Personnel of Legislature.

First Division—Senators; H. T. Tripp, of Juneau and J. M. Tanner, of Skagway. Representatives; N. J. Svindseth, of Wrangell, C. E. Ingersoll, of Ketchikan, Wm. Stubbins, of Douglas and A. G. Shoup, of Sitka.

Second Division—Senators; E. Bruner, of Nome; C. Freeding, of Nome; Representatives; T. Gaffney, of Nome; C. D. Jones, of Nome; J. C. Kennedy, of Candle; F. Aldrich, of Nome.

Stampeding Toward New Diggings Near Teslin Lake.

Advices from Telegraph Creek say half the population has hit the trail. One party gone up Stikine via Wrangell.

Juneau Merchants

Are Some Outfitters.

Two different communications from Telegraph Creek to citizens in Wrangell, convey the report that the inhabitants of that place, both Indian and white are stampeding to new diggings in beyond Dease Lake in direction of Teslin Lake and probably in the Nahlin River Region.

A recent Juneau paper carries an article relative to a strike near Teslin in which several Juneau parties and Skookum Jim, a Klondike discoverer have reported that gold has been found on five creeks and that three hundred claims have already been located. Teslin Lake is about 130 miles from Telegraph Creek and it is probable that the strike reported in Juneau and the one causing the fever in Telegraph are one and the same.

Monday morning, on the Curacao, a party of four men from Juneau, with four dog teams, sleds and outfits? landed here and departed for the Stikine as soon as they could engage a boat. The party, consisting of Fred Crawford C. A. Mccluskie, A. Marion and Joe McNaughton, purchased their outfit in Juneau and their grub stake looked like a freighting expedition. One item alone consisted of an entire case of bacon which for merely traveling on a six day trail could have been cut down to a few pounds. Other incidentals but necessities such as proper footwear and clothing for the trail were in the other extreme, some of their wants being supplied here before their hurried departure.

Stikine The Proper Route.

In the event of there being a permanent influx of miners toward Teslin Lake, The Stikine via Wrangell is bound to prove the popular route. Only last year the Canadian Government cut a trail from Telegraph Creek to Dease Lake which is only seventy miles Teslin and each mile that the strike lies southeast from Teslin makes a mile less of hard travel for the musher who goes in this way.

Word was received Tuesday from Telegraph Creek that A. Larson and J. A. Duffley are mushing down the Stikine to Wrangell. The telegram requested that a boat be sent over to the mouth of the Stikine to meet the travelers.

"Skookum Jim" Mason Goes South On Curacao.

Voyage of Klondike discoverer brings up many reminiscences of the exciting times of '98.

New "Strike" is Latest Speculation

On the Pacific Coast Boat. Curacao, Monday morning, was a noted Alaska Indian, "Skookum Jim" Mason, The Real Discoverer of the Klondike, who is probably making a visit to his brother-in-law in Seattle, George Cormack, retired miner to whom, the discovery of the famous placer mines is usually credited. The passage south of "Skookum Jim" brings up afresh to old timers the stirring times and experiences of '98 when the horde of gold seekers who rushed inside up the Stikine, up the Yukon, and over Chilkoot Pass, all bound for the rich diggings which were found on tributaries to the Klondike River in 1896 by Cormack, Skookum Jim and Dawson Charlie, another native of Cormack's party.

The Discovery.

Most interesting, perhaps because of its effect on the mining blood of the territory, is the story of the Klondike which brings up the technical point which makes Skookum Jim the "Real Discoverer". In 1896, Geo. Cormack, formerly of Illinois and now of Seattle, Washington, with Skookum Jim and Dawson Charlie were leisurely making their way over the upper Yukon country, trapping, hunting and prospecting. While the party was camped at Bonanza Creek, a tributary to the Klondike River, Skookum Jim layed down on the exposed bed rock at the waters edge to take a drink. In the crevices of the rocks he noticed the gold particles and taking up a pinch of the metal took it to Cormack who told him to get more.

Skookum Jim

Goes South

From one pan of gravel, the first washed, 750 worth of gold was taken. There is no record that Skookum threw the gold pan into the ether and yelled "Eureka." Being an American Indian, it is probable that not a change was apparent in the face of the real discoverer but the whole party proceeded to stake Discovery, Bonanza and other claims that made them immensely rich in later years, the use of which riches would make separate stories themselves.

Gilt-edge Talk of Today.

Since Monday morning, when it was generally made known that Skookum Jim went south on the Curacao, the hum of gilt-edged talk has been heard wherever two people with normal brains have been brought together and there is much "spec" as to his mission in the states. Since the Klondike has brought Skookum much riches, unlike Dawson Charlie who dissipated and dealt in diamonds until his decease by drowning Xmas Eve. 1909 at Caribou Crossing, Skookum Jim has been spending his time prospecting. If he has gone south to report a "strike" to Cormack, there'll be another "rush" for he has said that he would never report anything unless he had another Klondike or better. If, however, his mission is only a visit to relatives, quietness and disappointment will be in order, here at this end of the Stikine Trail.
